Admission to Doctoral Study

The doctoral program in Education offered by San Diego State University and Claremont Graduate University invites applications from individuals whose academic focus is on democratic schooling, social justice, equal educational outcomes for all students and the improvement of educational systems serving diverse communities.

To be considered for admission to the SDSU/CGU program, students must meet the general requirements for admission to both institutions with classified (full) graduate standing as outlined in the current respective bulletins. These include a master's degree in education or a related field from an accredited institution, good academic standing in the last institution attended, and an acceptable score on the Graduate Record Examination. Experience in the field is desirable. Students are admitted only in the fall of each academic year. Applicants must submit copies of all transcripts of previous college work, three letters of recommendation, a 1000-word personal statement, and results of the Graduate Record Examination. Personal interviews are conducted for the most promising applicants.

Specific Degree Requirements for the Ph.D. Degree in Education

A minimum of 48 semester units of residency, 24 at each institution, is required before a student is eligible to take qualifying examinations. In the interest of establishing an effective working relationship with faculty at both Claremont and San Diego State University, 12 of the student's first 24 units must be undertaken at Claremont Graduate University. In addition to these residency units, additional coursework may be needed before the student is competent to conduct dissertation research. The student must further demonstrate command of two research tools, including essential expertise in quantitative methods. After successful completion of four qualifying examinations and an oral defense of that work, the student is advanced to candidacy and enters the dissertation phase of the program.

Students seeking admission to the joint doctoral program in education should write directly to Alberto M. Ochoa, Director of the program, requesting application materials. Upon admission to the program, the student is guided by the requirements for the doctoral program given in Part Two of this bulletin and those listed under Education in the Claremont Graduate University Bulletin.

Faculty

The faculty bring diverse research and teaching interests to the study of democratic schooling, social justice, and diversity in education. Among the members of the faculty, the student will find rich resources of expertise in such areas as public policy, organizational theory and leadership, curriculum and instruction, higher education, counseling and school psychology, language development, qualitative and quantitative analysis, bilingual and cross-cultural education, educational technology, and special education.

Specific Degree Requirements for the Ed.D. Degree in Education

The faculties of the Colleges of Education at San Diego State University and at the University of San Diego jointly offer professional programs leading to the degree. This degree emphasizes the preparation of educational leaders and practitioners who can make significant contributions to solving problems in education and fostering the improvement of schools and other learning environments. The programs draw primarily on the faculty expertise and resources of San Diego State University and the University of San Diego, but these resources may be augmented from time to time by participation of selected faculty members from the University of California, San Diego; California State University, San Marcos; and California State University, San Bernardino.

Each of the programs require a minimum of 60 units of graduate level coursework. At least 24 course credits and six units of dissertation must be completed on each campus. All students will complete 15 units of core courses as well as six units of coursework in advanced research. With the concurrence of the faculty adviser, students will develop an area of study directly related to their educational objective. Each of these programs may include an internship.

Upon completion of 12 units of study, each student will meet with an adviser and a joint faculty committee to assess progress in the program, to develop a program of study, to discuss possible internship experience, and to define a research focus. After 30 semester units have been completed, students are eligible to begin the qualifying examinations process. Students who successfully complete these examinations will be recommended for advancement to candidacy and will be eligible to begin the dissertation phase of the program. Once enrolled for dissertation units, students must maintain continuous registration in that course until the doctoral faculty approves the dissertation. Once enrolled for dissertation, students are ineligible to apply for an official leave of absence.
